

ABSTRACT

Today's woman has journeyed long from being reliant to being independent. This study discovered that a girl cannot come freely out of home for work, whether she is in a dire economic need or she is career-oriented, in societies like Pakistan. Girls from lower-income class being less educated and unskilled are compelled to adopt less productive and more indecent occupations. Bus hosting is a job which does not meet standards of decent occupation according to ILO's rules. These potential young laborers are entering in the job of bus hosting for the wellbeing of their families irrespective of its unsuitability and female-unfriendliness. This study explains the Economic behavior of bus hostesses by accessing their income resources, expenditure heads, saving aptitudes, Job hazards and their contentment with this job. The descriptive analysis about the economic lives of Bus Hostesses enlighten that what economic and socio-economic deprivations these young girls have and how they manage to survive in such an unfair and biased work-related setup.

Keywords: Indecent Occupations, female-unfriendly job, Economic Lives, job-related stress, financial contentment, economic deprivation