

Abstract

Two real interpolation methods for quasi-normed spaces are presented. They have many applications in Analysis. Complete and at some points new proofs are provided. The relation between the two methods is investigated in a more general settings than usually it is done in the literature. Two open problems are stated. They are important in the extrapolation theory.