

Abstract

Enhancement in the lifetime of Protonium in the Presence of Laser has been studied theoretically by taking direct laser-protonium interaction into account. The direct interaction of intense laser field can make the particle and anti-particle to oscillate that might reduce possibility of mutual annihilation of particle and antiparticle. Hence, lifetime of protonium enhances. The decay probability has been calculated and its relationship with the laser parameters has been discussed.