

Abstract

21st century has brought far-reaching changes to the world politics. Popular discourses and aspirations have power to change the scenario of 21st century politics. Political discourses help to shape internal and foreign policies of the states. Similarly, Geostrategic and Geo economic relations among states have become the defining features of today's world. Pakistan and China have long been realized that in order to fulfil their respective national interests' regional connectivity is of paramount importance. China-Pakistan Economic Corridor would enhance regional connectivity and is expected to bring economic and social prosperity not only to South Asia but also to Central Asia. As expected China-Pakistan Economic Corridor would change the lives of millions of people so it's the utmost need to create a common consensus among the citizens of both China and Pakistan about CPEC. My research will contemplate on the political discourses that have been prevailed in Pakistan by different Political parties and also finds out the reasons behind these discourses. A lot of academic research has been done on Economic and Social benefits and on security concerns related to CPEC, but unfortunately very little work is being done on political discourses prevailing around CPEC in Pakistan. My research would be a new addition in academic research and finds out new horizons related to CPEC.
